

Fallen Stock Biohazard Bag

Fallen Stock Biohazard Bag

Fallen stock can no longer be buried or burnt in the open because of the risk of disease spreading through groundwater or air pollution. Animals must be taken to/collected by approved personnel either by private arrangement, or under the National Fallen Stock Scheme (NFSCO) but this still has its problems including:

- How soon they can be collected
- Possible spread of disease
- Odour problems especially during warmer months
- Extensive cleaning requirements for ACP and IPPC audit standards

Our poultry fallen stock bag almost eliminates all the problems that occur with this type of disposal.

Key Features

- Reduces the possible spread of diseases across farms
- Tough and durable
- Air tight so that there is a vast reduction in odours
- Leak proof, reducing the cleaning requirements for the fallen stock bin.
- Defra and ACP approved form of storing
- Cleaner for the collection service
- 2 sizes options available
- Supplied with bag ties if required
